Candy. No sugar added.

Studio Roeper presents CANDY, a new collection of side tables for 2012.

Mix 21 sheets copper leaf; 1 quart crystal clear epoxy resin; 1 cup paint; 1/2 leather hide. Paint and pour, stitch and stretch. CANDY is now ready to be served.

CANDY is an exploration into the merging of the unlikely, yet equally luxurious characteristics of metal leaf and leather. Florian Roeper, senior craftsman and founder of the company, drew inspiration for this design from leather bags and jewelry. "This is certainly a departure from my previous body of work, which is mainly due to the introduction of completely new materials, and therefore the necessity of learning and embracing new techniques. Compared to the mostly linear and bold attributes of the Studio Roeper collection, CANDY feels like a precious little gem that I want to put in my pocket," he says.

The table top consists of a metal leaf and painted pattern onto which a heavy coat of crystal clear epoxy resin is poured. This creates the same effect of depth and clarity as a sheet of glass would. The leather sleeve is sewn with a topstitch and finished with a piping detail around the top rim. Featured leathers are by Spinneybeck and Edelman. COL also available. Any combination of color, gold/silver/copper leaf and leather are available. Size: 23.5" x 18" x 20"H.

Studio Roeper is an Oakland-based design firm which handcrafts limited production lines of luxury furniture. Simple yet sophisticated, elegant yet dynamic, Roeper's aesthetic aims to engage the discerning individual who seeks warmth amongst the modern, and subtlety amongst the exclusive.
